What happened to the Fenway Faithful?

Johnny Pesky's funeral is today ◐ Some surprised by lack of turnout for wake of Sox legend ◐ Former Sox favorite died last week at age 92

As a player, manager and commentator, Johnny Pesky spent more than 60 years with the Red Sox, becoming a familiar face to countless fans.

Pesky, who died last Monday at 92 years old, was a legend for one of the most followed teams in all of sports. He didn't hit a lot of home runs and he hadn't played a Major League Baseball game since 1954, but he received one of the loudest ovations when he appeared during the 100th anniversary of Fenway Park earlier this year.

With all that Pesky had done for the Red Sox, and his North Shore community, those who paid their respects at his public wake yesterday were surprised to see few other fans and friends.

"I wish there was more people here," said James Raftelis, 52, of Lynn, after leaving the Lynn funeral home hosting Pesky's services.

Raftelis, dressed in a Red Sox jersey and hat and carrying Sox pictures, recalled Pesky's generosity in the community and pointed out how he always made time to sign autographs.

"I knew Johnny all of my life. I was glad to come down here," he said.

A public wake had been announced for yesterday that stretched from 2 p.m. through 8 p.m. For the first half of that time, fewer than 200 people came and went from the Solimine Landergan and Richardson Funeral Home.

The only time a line formed during the first half of the wake was right before the doors opened at 2 p.m.

However, those who did attend yesterday's wake and paid their respects recalled Pesky as a generous and modest man.

Debra Woodward, who traveled from North Hampton, N.H., to say goodbye to No. 6, recalled how she asked Pesky for his autograph and he jokingly told her that she didn't want his and should get a younger player's autograph. He signed the ball anyway.

"He was Mr. Red Sox to us." she said.

"He was like the grandfather of all the Red Sox — players, fans, whatever."

Players pay respects

While the funeral home was made open to all in Red Sox Nation yesterday, a private wake took place Saturday for members of the Red Sox organization and close friends and family. Boston Bruins legend and former player Milt Schmidt, 94, showed up Saturday to pay respect to his friend.

Players and Red Sox officials are expected at to attend the private funeral today. METRO/MN

Inside the funeral home

- No cameras were allowed inside the funeral home at the request of the family, but members of the public were invited inside.
- Photographs of Pesky as a young player were displayed inside the funeral home, as well as pictures of an older Pesky with fellow Red Sox legend Ted Williams.
- Pesky's casket was open and inside hung a No. 6, similar to the display of retired numbers inside Fenway Park.
- Donation envelopes were made available. Donations can be made to The Jimmy Fund, 10 Brookline Place, West Brookline, MA 02445.

Police look into second rape near Harvard Yard

- Two rapes have occurred in or near the Yard in less than a week
- Campus police increasing patrols

▶ Harvard Yard was peaceful during the day last week, but two rapes took place near there at night.

COURTNEY SACCO/METRO

A woman reported being attacked and raped near Harvard Yard, making it the second reported rape in the area in less than a week.

The most recent attack occurred just after 11 p.m. Tuesday, but the woman reported the incident to Somerville police on Friday. The Harvard University Police Department then put out an alert that same day.

The woman said she was attacked near Oxford and Kirkland streets.

That incident is a short distance from where the first attack occurred on Aug. 10, at about 3:15 a.m.

A woman reported that she was grabbed as she walked through the Johnston Gate. She was pulled behind Massachusetts Hall and attacked, police said.

Neither of the women were affiliated with the university.

University police said again that they have increased the presence of both uniformed and plainclothes officers in and around the Yard and surrounding campus.

"The Harvard University Police Department wants to remind students, faculty, and staff that we are located in an urban setting and share many of the crime and safety issues that exist in any city. Community members should be vigilant while walking throughout campus and surrounding areas," university police said in their alert.

The suspect in the most recent attack was described as a white man in his mid-20s, about 5 feet, 6 inches tall with a thin build and dark, spiky hair. Anyone with information can call 617-495-1796.

App reads pulse by looking at your face

A recently released app co-created by an MIT graduate can measure your heart rate simply by looking at your face through a smartphone camera.

The Cardiio app for iOS nabbed the top spot in iPhone's health and fitness app category just days after its release.

It works by having users look straight into the phone's front camera so it can detect small changes in reflected light that are not visible to the human eye. The changes, according to developers, are brought on by blood pumping into the face. That slight increase in blood volume causes more light to be absorbed, and therefore less light to be reflected.

"It makes it so simple. People stare at their screens all day, so we figured, why not keep track?" said MIT graduate Ming-Zher Poh, a co-founder of Cardiio.

The Navy's oldest commissioned warship, the USS Constitution, sailed under her own power yesterday for just the second time in more than 130 years. It was during that battle that she gained the nickname "Old Ironsides" when cannonballs bounced off her sides.

Peace rally aims to 'shake the city' after string of homicides

▶ A $2,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and prosecution of the suspect, according to the Boston TenPoint Coalition.

A week after a gunman approached a group of young women in a parked car and fatally shot three of them, still stunned community members held a peace rally yesterday in Dorchester.

Scores of people attended the "Shake the City" rally yesterday at Franklin Field.

Organizers said they were trying to unite the community in the face of tragedy.

"We want to let the perpetrator(s) know that we are mad, and actively seeking justice. Violence is becoming a terrorism in our community and we cannot let violence rob us of our sense of security any longer," organizers said in an invitation letter.

Kristen Lartey, Sharrice Perkins and Genevieve Philip, all 22, were sitting in a car on Harlem Street on the Dorchester-Mattapan border with a fourth woman when a gunman approached them and opened fire about 9:30 p.m. Aug. 12. The women were killed and the fourth woman was treated for injuries that were not life-threatening.

"Violence is becoming a terrorism in our community and we cannot let violence rob us of our sense of security any longer."
A LETTER BY RALLY ORGANIZERS

Last week, police Commissioner Ed Davis said the shooting was likely gang-related. No arrests have been made as of Sunday morning.

Clergy members were also asked to announce yesterday morning during their worship services a reward for information leading to an arrest and prosecution of person responsible for the murders last week.

"It is unusual for an organization to make this kind of financial offer, but we live in a culture of violence, and this must change," said the Rev. Jeffrey Brown, the executive director of the Boston TenPoint Coalition. "It is time for the community in general, and the community of faith in particular, to take measures that will end the siege of violence on our young people."

In addition to the murder of the three women, a man was killed early Aug. 12 in Roslindale in another group shooting.

On Wednesday, a man was stabbed to death in Roxbury after he and another man had become involved in a fight as they stepped off of an MBTA bus.

Man tries to grab cop's gun during violent struggle

A Dorchester man is due in court today after he became involved in a violent struggle with police officers during which he allegedly tried to take an officer's gun.

The man, Jurrell Laronal, 26, allegedly turned violent on the officers as they frisked him after a traffic stop Saturday afternoon in Mattapan.

He kicked and punched the officers, according to police.

"At one point, one of the officers felt the suspect reach for his department-issued firearm. Upon feeling the suspect reach around his body and grab the handle of his firearm, the officer, fearing for his life and safety, did everything in his power to thwart the suspect's efforts," according to police.

During the struggle, police said several neighbors began to "verbally taunt and disparage the officers" and began recording the incident with their cell phones while shouting "stop hitting him."

Officers were eventually able to pin Laronal against the car after using open hand and knee strikes, police said.

The incident started when police ran a license plate and found the owner of the vehicle had a suspended license.

When they pulled over the vehicle, the officers found Laronal behind the wheel. Laronal allegedly told the officers he just got out of jail, but he got his license back.

Laronal was charged with driving after a suspended license, drug possession with intent to distribute, resisting arrest and assault and battery on a police officer. METRO/MN

Assange berates US from Ecuador embassy balcony

CARL COURT/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Julian Assange addresses the press and his supporters from the balcony of the Ecuadorian Embassy in London yesterday.

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange berated the United States yesterday from the balcony of the Ecuadorean embassy where he has sought refuge from arrest, challenging President Barack Obama to end what he called a "witch hunt" against his whistle-blowing website.

Speaking from within the London mission to avoid being detained by British police who want to extradite him to Sweden for questioning over rape allegations, Assange said the United States was fighting a war against outlets like WikiLeaks.

Pitching himself alongside Russian punk band Pussy Riot and the New York Times newspaper, Assange said the United States risked shunting the world into an era of journalistic oppression. He did not mention the rape allegations.

"I ask President Obama to do the right thing: the United States must renounce its witch hunt against WikiLeaks," Assange said in a 10-minute speech.

Syria's Assad makes rare appearance for Eid prayers

BEIRUT. Syrian President Bashar al-Assad made his first appearance in public since a July bombing that killed four top security officials, attending prayers at a Damascus mosque yesterday to mark the start of the Muslim holiday of Eid, state TV showed.

The first day of Eid also gave Assad's opponents a chance to rally, and activists reported protests around Syria, including in the capital, on a holiday that marks the end of the Islamic holy fasting month of Ramadan.

Battling a 17-month-old uprising against 42 years of rule by his family, Assad was filmed at prayer with his prime minister and foreign minister but not with his vice president, Farouq al-Shara, whose reported defection was denied the previous day. REUTERS

When auto shutdown loomed, Ryan backed off fiscal hawk stance

WASHINGTON. When General Motors announced in 2008 that it would shut down its assembly plant in Janesville, Wis., local Representative Paul Ryan leaped into action.

Ryan met with company executives to try to change their minds. He lobbied the Obama administration for federal retraining and economic-development funds.

He even broke with his party to vote in Congress for a $15 billion federal bailout for GM and Chrysler.

Criticized by President Obama this week as the "ideological leader" of cost-slashing Republicans in Congress, Ryan has veered from his budget-hawk stance at crucial times. REUTERS

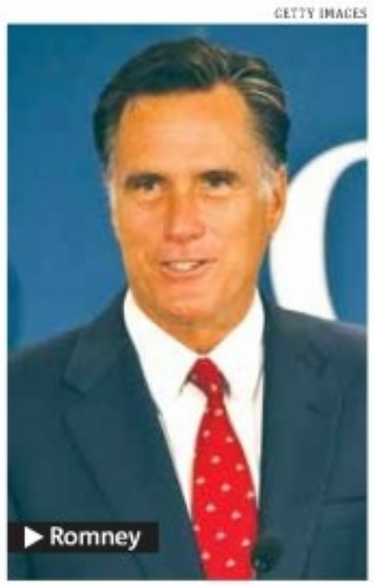
Ryan's Fed policy views well outside mainstream

WASHINGTON. Paul Ryan doesn't quite want to end the Fed. But if Mitt Romney's pick had his way, he might curb the central bank's powers enough to make it harder for policymakers to respond aggressively to economic downturns.

Ryan has supported controversial legislation that would strip the U.S. Federal Reserve of its mission to seek maximum employment, and has been a harsh critic of the central bank's continued loose monetary policy. REUTERS

Why hasn't Romney released tax return? 2011 isn't ready yet

GETTY IMAGES



Republican U.S. presidential challenger Mitt Romney plans to make public his 2011 tax return by Oct. 15, a senior campaign adviser said yesterday.

Romney, a former private equity executive who is one of the richest men ever to run for president, has come under pressure for months from the Obama campaign to release more years of tax returns.

He has released his 2010 tax return and estimates for 2011 but does not plan to reveal more years of returns. In April, he requested an extension from the Internal Revenue Service to file his 2011 tax forms, while estimating his tax liability at $3.2 million for last year.

$3.2M

Romney estimated his tax liability at $3.2 million for last year.

Ed Gillespie, a senior Romney adviser, indicated the former Massachusetts governor would release the 2011 return by Oct. 15, about three weeks before the Nov. 6 election, but refused to say exactly when.

"Look, Oct. 15 is the deadline for the IRS on an extension. We have said as soon as they're ready we're going to release them. And I believe they'll be ready before that," Gillespie told the "Fox News Sunday" program.

"They're being finalized. There's a lot of forms that have to come in from other entities that the governor doesn't have control over," Gillespie added.

He said Americans will have "ample information" about Romney's taxes with the disclosure of the 2010 return and the planned release of the 2011 return. REUTERS

Pew's new research debates value of checking accounts for college students

On Aug. 8, the Pew Charitable Trusts released its most recent report in a series focused on checking accounts, and the results will no doubt be of interest to college students — and their parents.

"Student Checking Accounts: Are They Worth It?" looked at student accounts offered by the 12 largest U.S. banks and 12 largest credit unions. Pew found that these accounts typically contained only minor differences from other "basic accounts" offered to everyone and that these differences were not always helpful to students. Moreover, the differences were often buried in more than 90 pages of disclosures and agreements. Pew's policy arm — the Pew Center on the States — wants the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to mandate basic "fact boxes" for all checking accounts, including student accounts.

"These things are very long, text-heavy and full of legalese. What we need is a nutrition label for checking accounts. It needs to be clear and uniform, the way it is on a can of soup," says Susan K. Weinstock, the director of Pew's Safe Checking in the Electronic Age Project.

In focus groups, researchers discovered that college students were disproportionately affected by overdraft fees. Two specific overdraft fees associated with these accounts have gone up in the past two years: extended overdraft penalties and overdraft transfers.

"Right now, if you want to shop for a checking account, you can look at where the branches are and where the ATMs are, but that's pretty much it," says Weinstock. "We want people to be able to shop on the things that really matter — what it's going to cost them."

Rick Ross for prez? Why not?

The election cycle tends to bring out the usual celebrities touting their causes and endorsements, from Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie (the legalization of gay marriage) to Kid Rock (something indiscernible about freedom and 'Merica).

We're not sure what it says about us, you or the shining seas, but Rick Ross' rundown of the heavy-hitter issues in Rolling Stone is about as well reasoned and coherent as you'll hear in any debate:

On the medicinal properties of marijuana: "I call it green caviar. It's like a short vacation — it helps me chill out. And people really love it when I chill out, because I can really be a d—head."

On gun control: "I think we all have a right to bear arms, whichever amendment that is."

On the place of religion in schools: "They wanted me to learn the Ten Commandments. I told them I didn't really have time for that right now."

On gay marriage and free speech: "Chick-fil-A obviously took their stand. That's their right — the same way the pro-gay people are taking their stand. I believe everybody got the right to live their own life the way they want to."

▶ Robert Downey Jr.

Downey Jr. takes a tumble on set

Production on "Iron Man 3" has halted after the franchise's star, Robert Downey Jr., was injured on set, Marvel Studios confirms in a statement. "Robert Downey Jr. sustained an ankle injury on the set of 'Iron Man 3' in Wilmington, N.C., while performing a stunt," the statement reads. "There will be a short delay in the production schedule while he recuperates." There's no word on how much the delay will cost the production.

Perry-Mayer is still happening

Katy Perry and John Mayer's new rumored relationship keeps chugging along, with the pair spotted getting quite cozy at a Hollywood Hills pool party, according to Hollyscoop. Photos from the party show the "Your Body is a Wonderland" singer with his arm around a bikini-clad Perry, then later getting close in the water. This is the third time Perry and Mayer have been spotted out and about together, though neither has confirmed they are dating.

Turning the tables

Plenty of actors try out a music career, and that's fine — we don't have to buy their albums. But when stars jump in the DJ booth, hundreds of innocent partygoers must pay.

1 We get that Pauly D was a DJ before "Jersey Shore." But appearing on that show doesn't come without repercussions.

2 We're not sure what former Pussycat Doll Aubrey O'Day is doing here, but we're pretty sure it's not DJing.

3 We know she dated DJ Samantha Ronson, but we're still not buying Lindsay Lohan mixing tunes.

4 To the horror of real DJs, Paris Hilton is frequently slinking around the DJ booth. This time, she brought along Lady Gaga.

5 Did you really think you were going to make it through this without a Kim Kardashian sighting?

6 So nerdy, it almost works: Elijah Wood amplified the Bushmills Irish Whiskey launch party earlier this month.

When with Rome

Singer starts a solo career with 'Dedication,' but he says his true dedication will always be to Sublime

What's it going to be? Rome? Rome Ramirez? Rome Without Sublime? The latter-day singer for the So-Cal ska-punk veterans just released his solo debut, the "Dedication" EP, but what to call his new band?

"How about just The Incredibly Handsome Rome," Ramirez jokes. "[People will think] 'We need to check out this incredibly handsome boy!'"

He laughs before continuing more seriously.

"I have my best friends that I've grown up with playing music on stage with me in the band," he says of his solo project, which will likely be named Rome. "It's awesome: Now I get the chance to pass the torch down to my friends. It's the most beautiful gift to be able to offer someone an opportunity."

He should know, because that's what Sublime did for him.

"Sublime will always be my main priority. I'll do my album around that. I don't want to rush this; it will be how I want it, when I want it. Time is on my side."

"They took me around the world, introduced me to amazing people and showed me great things," he says. "I had all this built-up inspiration."

Ramirez will follow with a full-length record, but for now, he and Sublime co-founder, bassist Eric Wilson, are concentrating on promoting last year's Sublime with Rome debut album, "Yours Truly."

Sublime's original drummer, Bud Gaugh, opted out after recording the album; Josh Freese (who has played with everyone from Guns N' Roses to Devo) is behind the kit for now.

"Sublime will always be my main priority," adds Ramirez. "I'll do my album around that. I don't want to rush this; it will be how I want it, when I want it. Time is on my side."

Rome won't roam too far this summer

Rome's solo songs speak to the same sunny So-Cal grooves as Sublime's, so it's no wonder he fit easily into much-loved frontman Bradley Nowell's shoes. (Nowell died from a heroin overdose in 1996.) But the summer tour is all about Sublime: "I'd love for fans to love my music as much as they love Sublime's, but I do really want to keep the difference between [them] when the fans come out to see Sublime. I really do want to keep it separate and draw a line."

Using social media to promote your art

Over the last two decades, New York conceptual artist Brainard Carey has carved out a career for himself on the international scene, with featured performances at the Whitney and Venice Biennials, among other notable venues.

But he has also pursued a parallel career as a kind of motivational speaker for contemporary artists. His message: In order to have a career, you have to develop your strategic voice, not just your artistic voice.

"Artists who have a sense of aesthetics and quality constantly see other work which is poorly made — or just bad — being exhibited. That's very frustrating. But it also tells us something: There is another mechanism, beyond quality, for why that work is presented," explains Carey. "So all I'm saying is, 'let's look at what those mechanisms are.'"

His latest book, "New Markets For Artists," is a sequel to last year's "Making It in the Art World." This time, Carey wants to help artists rethink their use of social media and online markets.

"One of the ways people gain access is understanding how to reach people in an effective way. It's all incredibly personal. How we approach people and handle ourselves is 90 percent of what's going on in our careers," he explains. "We have to practice our etiquette and think about how we're approaching people. The best analogy is online dating: It's not very effective to say, 'Here's my picture. If you think I'm handsome, click my e-mail.' Yet that's basically what artists often do with their work. That's not attractive. People want to see something about who you are and how you think."

BRUCE WALSH
bruce.walsh@metro.us

The art of Face-Twit

Carey feels that most artists misuse Facebook and Twitter. Typically, artists spend the majority of their Face-Twit time posting their latest works. But, for Carey, commenting on the work of others is a more useful way to engage with the technology. A thoughtful comment on a fellow artist's work is one of the most effective ways to widen the audience for your own work.

Are women helping each other in the workplace?

"Women help women in the workplace in myriad ways," proclaims Teresa Currier, chair of Saul Ewing LLC's Women's Development Initiative. "First, the mere presence of other professional women helps younger women making their way up, because a strong population of women silently stands for the proposition of inclusion in one of its many forms."

It's difficult to say if this thought reflects what's really happening in the workplace. Of course, we hope it's accurate, but a recent poll by LinkedIn found that 51 percent of women surveyed between the ages of 18 and 29 said that they have not been mentored by female colleagues. Of the women questioned, 67 percent of those who aren't mentoring others said the reason is because they haven't been asked to mentor anyone.

"We're all in this together. Women today know that, and act upon it."
CURRIER

While it's hard not to get discouraged by these numbers, it's important to remember a couple of things. First, each situation is circumstantial.

Brittany Sykes, senior account executive at Teszler PR, Inc., recalls when her supervisor, Barbara Teszler, helped her advance in her career. "After interning [for Teszler], I was offered a trial run for a position and ultimately became a publicist," says Sykes. "[Teszler] left the company to start her own and because she loved the work I did for her, I followed her a few months later. We now work together, bouncing ideas off of each other every day and constantly bringing in new business."

CREATAS

▶ Just because she hasn't asked for a mentor doesn't mean that she doesn't want one.

Aside from the numbers, the LinkedIn survey tells us something very insightful: Women aren't asking to be mentored. "We're all in this together," Currier reminds us. "Women today know that, and act upon it." If we look up to other women in the workplace, the study suggests we need to start asking them to help us in our own careers. JULIA WEST

How to start your day on the right foot

PIXLAND

▶ The weekend may be over, but the good times don't have to end.

Whatever attitude we wake up with can dictate how we experience the rest of the day. When we wake with a BADitude, our negative energy leaks into every area of life. Starting the day with low-level energy can negatively affect our commute to work, the way we interact with others and our overall productivity throughout the day. But starting the day with a good attitude can set us up to win! Incorporate these tools into your morning routine and start every day with a positive disposition that will last well past the closing bell.

Jump-start the day with positive intentions

Zen in the city

GABRIELLE BERNSTEIN

WWW.GABBYB.TV

Your intentions create your reality, and what you focus on first thing in the morning can have a powerful impact on your whole day. Therefore, the goal here is to set positive intentions from the get-go. The moment you open your eyes, choose a positive intention. Say it out loud, write it in a journal or affirm it while looking in the mirror. Take time to commit to a positive intention and trust that focusing on the good stuff will carry you straight through to nighttime.

Silently bless the people in your life

If you focus on resentments toward others (such as getting stressed about co-workers) while brewing your morning coffee, your negative attitude will set the tone for all your interactions. Instead of launching into the day with anger and negativity, say a silent prayer for the people you've been resenting. Pray for them to have all that you want for yourself and envision them happy. I know this may sound difficult, but it's totally worth it. The instant you bless another person, you clear space to receive more love and positivity.

Go easy on the media intake

▶ Do you check your phone the moment you wake up? Though this habit seems natural, it can create a lot of anxiety and tension. Give yourself time to begin the day with clarity and peace. Commit to refraining from e-mail, news, texts and social media for the first hour of your day. Use the morning to prepare for the day instead.

Social ills sign immorality coming home to roost

RE: "DON'T BE CHICKEN – PROTEST CORRECTLY" (METRO, AUG. 17-19) Harry Cooperman seems to confuse leftist ideals with American ideals. He believes that people have the right to pursue happiness by "any" means. The American ideal allows for the pursuit of happiness by "legal" means. He also believes Dan Cathy's moral beliefs are wrong simply because they are inconsistent with his leftist ideals. American ideals allow for freedom of religion and thought for all, not just for those on the left. Many of the social ills in America are a direct result of the leftist creed that people have a right to pursue happiness by any means — hence illegal immigration, teen mothers, absentee fathers, abortions, adultery, etc.

SHOSHANA ROSE, VIA E-MAIL

Have a dictionary handy while mud-slinging

Those who write in calling people who disagree with them "homophobic" need to consult a dictionary. Homophobia is an unreasonable fear of or aversion to homosexuals or homosexuality. You can disagree with homosexual ideas because you believe they are intrinsically wrong or detrimental in some way to society, etc. Intellectual disagreement and aversion are two very different things. Aversion has to do with feelings, with repugnance. For example, you can have a gay child you love dearly and still not agree with same-sex marriage. Homosexuals should stop calling people names and appearing ignorant.

ADELAIDE VERPONI, VIA E-MAIL

Disregarding beliefs of others is a two-way street

Dan Cathy has his rights about his beliefs against same-sex marriage and I will stand by him 100 percent. I also am against same-sex marriage and believe that homosexuals aren't allowed to marry. According to the Bible, homosexuality is a sin. I will support Chick-fil-A to operate here in NYC. Gay people need to quit protesting against Chick-fil-A because of its belief against gay marriage and get a life. People have a right to oppose gay marriage and there's nothing they can do about it.

DAVID BOWMAN, VIA E-MAIL

Under Obamacare, elderly will suffer

Let's talk simply. The undisputed $716 billion being cut from Medicare is so that money can be used to pay for the new people Obamacare is planned to cover. It comes out of doctor and hospital reimbursements, which simply means that many doctors will stop taking Medicare patients because the government is not going to pay for even the cost to care for them. The same with hospitals, except the hospitals will just go out of business. In other words, many, many current seniors on Medicare will not be serviced. This is how Obama is saying he will reduce costs: ignoring the needs of the "too old" seniors. There is a much better way: the Ryan/Wyden plan.

Horoscope

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Unless you can rise above your emotions, think twice before attending a social gathering that will include some people you dislike. Trouble could result.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. It behooves you to reassess your objectives in case you might be striving for something that's not worth the effort. Make sure that your priorities are in the right place.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Don't waste your time arguing with someone about an issue that he or she isn't willing to budge on. All it's likely to do is cause you a great deal of discomfort.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Instead of relying on another for support, try to be self-sufficient. Even if this person's help is forthcoming, you might find that you're better off without it.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. In order to be successful, it's imperative that you have staying power. Guard against slackening your effort just when your objective is within reach.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Certain advantages that you presently possess might be lost or undermined if you exert too much pressure on cohorts. Know when to stop pushing and when to start pleasing.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Keep an open mind and give associates credit for being at least as smart as you. It's a mistake to discount their ideas and views just because they're different from yours.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Chances are you'll get better terms if you allow the other party to make the first proposal in a business deal. Associates are apt to treat you more generously than you anticipate.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. As long as companions are cooperative and making concessions, you'll be extremely congenial. Should they want what you want, however, it'll be another story.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Provided you don't take on something that you're ill-prepared to handle, the probability for fulfilling your ambitious objectives is good. Try to operate within known boundaries.

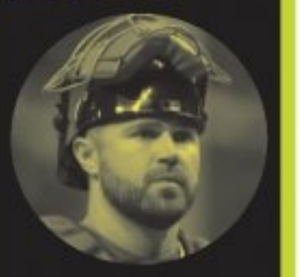
Red Sox



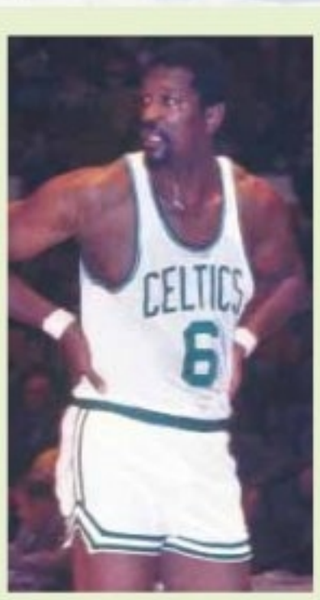
Text-y situation
The New York Daily News reported yesterday that former Sox backup catcher Kelly Shoppach was the one who authored the text message sent to Boston's ownership group in late July. Shoppach was traded to the Mets last week.

Boston's Mt. Rushmore

With Aly Raisman's jump to Boston sports stardom, it's time to re-examine the four athletes who define the city's sports history most ◐ Even Larry Legend didn't make our cut

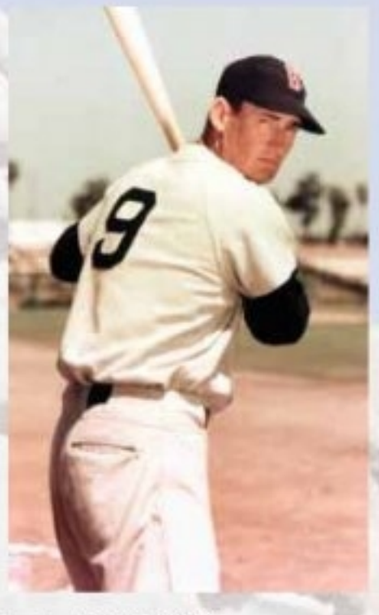
GETTY IMAGES

At the height of "Aly Raisman-mania," there was one particular note of hyperbole that caused a stir on the Boston sports scene. Comcast SportsNet's Gary Tanguay said that the Needham gymnast belonged on Boston sports' Mount Rushmore. Now, as phenomenal as Raisman's feat was (two gold medals and a bronze), it occurred over the span of a few days. The four guys carved into the minds of most sports fans in New England built their legacies over a decade and brought years and years of joy to the region. Raisman is one of the greatest Boston sports figures of all-time, but we're talking about a list here that routinely leaves Larry Bird off when discussed. If you're too young to remember, Bird brought three NBA titles home in the 1980s and did the absolute impossible — he made Boston a basketball town for several glorious years. The height of Bird's popularity during this period in time cannot be exaggerated. His blue-collar, stone cold killer-like demeanor made every guy in Boston want to grow a wispy mustache and shoot hoops. ● MATT BURKE



Bill Russell 1956-69

Larry Bird didn't make the cut. It's largely due to this guy. Russell won an unprecedented 11 NBA titles, which makes him the greatest winner in sports history. No. 6 changed the game with his defensive prowess and averaged 22.5 rebounds per game in his career. He was a five-time NBA MVP.



Ted Williams 1939-60

"The greatest hitter who ever lived," "The Kid," "Teddy Ballgame," "The Splendid Splinter." No one could decide on one nickname for Williams, the best player in Red Sox history and arguably the best offensive player in baseball history. While jokes about his frozen head reign supreme with the young Boston audience, he should always be remembered as the last player to bat .400 in a season and an all-time great American. Williams missed playing baseball from 1942-46 and 1952-53 due to his service as a naval aviator for the U.S. Marine Corps in WWII and Korea.

Bobby Orr 1966-76

The greatest defensive hockey player of all-time, Orr is sometimes a forgotten man on the national sports platform. Locals insist to this day that he is "better than Gretzky," and had knee issues not cut his career short, he likely would have had the stats to back it up. Orr led the NHL in assists for five years as a defenseman and brought home two Stanley Cups. The image of Orr flying through the air after scoring a game-winning goal is cemented (literally) outside TD Garden.

Tom Brady 2000-present

The book is not fully written on No. 12, but there is still time for him to go down as the best QB to ever play the game. At the beginning of his career he won three Super Bowl titles but didn't have the stats to back-up Patriots fans' claims that he was the best in the NFL. That changed starting in 2007, when he had the greatest single season a quarterback could ever have, throwing 50 touchdown passes while leading the Pats to a 16-0 regular season record. Brady has guided New England to the Super Bowl five times in the past 11 years. He won the NFL MVP award in 2007 and 2010.

SNORING?

As recommended by Dr. Gifford-Jones M. D.

#23

Here is proof that snoring can be corrupting your health and your marriage. Three out of 10 couples are considering divorce because of snoring says a major magazine article. You are not alone! An official survey says 48% of all people snore. 75% are affected, if you add non-snoring husbands that have snoring wives or vice versa. Snoring is caused by slack muscles in the throat. A common complaint is that people feel that they are not well rested in the morning. Many people wrote they are now sleeping like a babies. Their partners are delighted. This natural health product Sound Sleep #23 usually helps the first night. No side effects.

■ College professor had lack of good sleeps with many interruptions for last 8 years that made her tired during the day. Within 3 days taking Bell Sound Sleep #23 the terrible snoring stopped. Snoring episodes have completely disappeared. This has improved our lives enormously. Leo Fortin, 60, St-Georges, QC ■ Basically you saved my husband's life. For the last 5 years my husband had very bad nights. Bell #23 was nothing short of a miracle. I have my husband back. No more snoring. No more napping during the day. I am telling all our friends. Bonnie Johnson, 64, Wichita, KS ■ My life changed. Sleep now 7-8 hours. I am a retired college professor and author of books. I have no more need to nap during the day. Nothing I tried helped until I started Bell Sound Sleep. I am so delighted with this product I would like to make motivational speeches to help others. *Carmen V. Test sample No. 2

Three things for Pats fans to look for Monday night when the Philadelphia Eagles invade Gillette Stadium (8 p.m., ESPN):

1 O-LINE ANY BETTER?
One of the biggest issues in camp is the cohesiveness of the offensive line. It's undoubtedly strange for Tom Brady to not have his reliable left tackle, Matt Light, protecting his blind side anymore, but Brady has no choice but to move on. Second-year offensive lineman Nate Solder will take over, and hopefully fare better than he did against the Saints. Left guard Logan Mankins is back practicing with the team as well, but you won't see him tonight. Still no sign of right guard Brian Waters. The Patriots can have all the offensive weapons in the world, but without a capable O-line, it'll be ugly.

2 EARLY TEST FOR DEFENSE
While they've yet to get it all together, the Eagles boast one of the better offenses in the NFL: Mike Vick at QB, LeSean McCoy at RB, DeSean Jackson and Jeremy Maclin at wide receiver — to name a few. I'm keeping an eye on the Patriots secondary, specifically safeties Pat Chung and Steve Gregory. Gregory was signed by the Pats in the offseason, and he and Chung have jelled nicely on the practice field. Bill Belichick seems happy with what he's seen at the position.

3 RUNNING OUT OF TIME
Going into the second preseason game, there's no real frontrunner for the starting running back position. Stevan Ridley has still shown some issues holding on to the ball, and it has opened the door for fellow second-year back, Shane Vereen. Vereen could take advantage of his situation with a strong start against the Eagles' starters tonight. He's been a nice pass-catching back in camp, but showed his skill on the ground against the Saints. Keep a close eye on the playing time and production of each back.
